The text

1. "I think you should be able to smoke everywhere in: in swimming pools, on the tube, in restaurants, etc. If a non-smoking friend took a dim view of me smoking, it'd be, like, do they really want to be my friend? I might have to put up with things they say or the way they eat. What's passive smoking? There are passive lots of things. Like passive listening to shiteheads. I have to put up with that every day. They give me a headache. One day people's conversations on the street will do me in.
2. "I started smoking when I was 12. Nobody told me not to. Maybe I wouldn't be doing it now if I'd known the risks. "My wife has never had a cigarette, but she knows that if I stop I turn into some kind of horrible monster. My wife bothers about breath smells, which is OK, but it doesn't worry me. I've got a huge bottle of breath freshener that gives me ulcers. But if you're really worried, eat mints or don't talk to anybody.
3. "Last Christmas, I went to see my dad and he looked really ill. He was a heavy smoker and the doctors said it was lung cancer and that he only had a month left. After a couple of weeks they let him home for a bit. I'd been on this 'new man' thing and arrived with orange juice and grapes and all these leaflets. "He told me smoking had taken eight years off his life, but he didn't miss them because he was happy with the 71 he'd had. It's a good way of looking at things. He died in May. If anything will make you stop smoking it's seeing all these lung cancer patients in the hospital ward. It's a terrible sight, but it didn't make me stop.
4. "It was the first time I'd seen anyone die, and I know I could get the same thing. It's a weird religious thing when you're holding someone's hand and they pass away. Because of that, it's made me strong about living in a positive way. You can try to be somebody else but it's a lie. I smoke - that's the kind of person I am. I think you should look in the mirror every day and say, "Hey, I like me just the way I am."

The UN children's agency, UNICEF, found that where women are excluded from family decisions, children are more likely to be under-nourished. There would be 13 millionmalnourished children in South Asia if women had an equal say in the family, Unicef said. Unicef surveyed family decision-making in 30 countries around the world- their chief finding is that equality between men and women isto reducing poverty and improving health, especially that of children, in developing countries. The conclusions are contained in the agency's latest report. This report points to a greater lack of opportunities for girls and women in education and work which contributes toand poverty. Where men control the household, less money is spent on health care and food for the family, whichin poorer health for the children.

Almost every technology has a bright and dark side to it, its positive and negative repercussions. About a couple of decades back, communicating with a relative or friend (Be / not)as easy as it is today. We used to correspondence once or twice a month to inform them about the latest happenings. We were deeply involved in the communication process. We were so excited while speaking to our parents or friends while calling them from abroad. But today, such emotions can (hard)be witnessed. Inevitably, we are technologically advanced but we have been morally and spiritually weakened. We (head)towards cultural decadence ever since technology has become a part of lives. It seems as if we have sunk into an ocean of nothingness. With the help of the (late)technology, fake IDs can easily be made. Besides, you can post malicious content to defame a relative or friend. You can also do it out of jealousy or if you want to take revenge for something.
